Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its twentieth session from 27 October to 7 November 2014. The review of Italy was held at the 1 meeting on 27 October 2014. The delegation of Italy was headed by Mr. Lapo Pistelli State Minister for Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation. At its 10 meeting held on 31 October 2014, the Working Group adopted the report on Italy.
2. On 15 January 2014, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Italy: Ireland, Ethiopia and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Italy:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/20/ITA/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/20/ITA/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/20/ITA/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Germany, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America was transmitted to Italy through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. Mr. Lapo Pistelli, State Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation introduced Italy's National Report. The delegation highlighted that Italy's action within the UN system as well as in other international and regional organizations had been characterized in recent years by a number of initiatives on specific issues including the promotion of a moratorium on the death penalty; the safeguard and protection of migrants, asylum seekers and refugees; and the promotion of dialogue among cultures and religions, among others
6. The delegation then addressed advanced questions.
7. On the issue of participation of civil society organisations in the national report, it was indicated that the Inter-ministerial Committee for Human Rights had held several consultative meetings with civil society organisations and members of the Italian Parliament to discuss the contents of the National Report. In particular, the implementation of recommendation 92 accepted in first cycle had been ensured by means of the publication of the draft National report on the Committee's website to offer civil society at large the opportunity to comment on the contents. It was highlighted that Italy had implemented 74 out of 78 recommendations accepted in the first cycle including several that had been not accepted. It was noted particularly that the Italian Senate had recently approved a bill introducing the crime of torture, which was at the Chamber of Deputies, and that the status of illegal immigration as an aggravating circumstance had been removed by the Constitutional Court in 2010.

8. As for the enactment of domestic legislation, following the ratification of the Statute of the International Criminal Court, Parliament had been working on legislative measures to adjust Italy's laws to International Humanitarian Law and to the Statute of the International Criminal Court.

9. Italy then stated that there had been continuing engagement in a domestic process aimed at establishing an Independent National Commission for the Promotion and Protection of Human Rights in accordance with the Paris Principles. It was highlighted that a debate in the Parliament was taking place about the best way to accomplish this and about the best tool for implementation. Since last June the Inter-ministerial Committee for Human Rights had promoted a consultation with NGOs and representatives of civil society and was currently finalizing a paper containing suggestions about which model of institution could better fit in with the Paris Principles in Italy.

10. With regard to the implementation of the UN Guiding Principles on business and human rights, the delegation stated that Italy had presented to the European Commission in 2013 "The Foundations of the Italian Action Plan on UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights" and work was in progress to finalize the Italian Action Plan by the end of 2015.

11. The delegation recalled that because of its geographic situation, Italy had been exposed over the last two years to massive inflows of migrants and that the country was at the forefront of an extraordinary effort to save human lives at sea. It was underscored that the principle of "non refoulement" had been always granted, in compliance with international norms. Italy was strongly committed to search and rescue activities (SAR) at sea ensuring the rescue of migrants onto the Italian territory. It was recalled that after the Lampedusa tragedy last year, it had intensified such activities by launching in October 2013 operation "Mare Nostrum" to deal with the humanitarian emergency deriving from the exceptional arrival of migrants on the Central Mediterranean route.

12. As for the registration of migrants, according to Dublin and EURODAC regulations, forensic police and immigration officers were tasked with identification procedures. It was noted that last September the Ministry of Interior had issued guidelines to improve the efficiency of the system.

13. It was noted that, after the initial period in Reception Centres for asylum seekers, which could last from 20 to 35 days depending on the inflow, refugees and asylum seekers were hosted in the Asylum seekers and refugees protection system network, managed by local authorities and financed through the National Fund for Asylum Policies and Services.

14. The delegation recalled that the Reception System for Asylum/International protection Seekers (SPRAR) was tasked with managing the allocation of applicants on the basis of burden-sharing among Regions, Provinces and Municipalities. Details of measures taken for the optimization of the reception system were provided.

15. With reference to the allocation and use of the new European Fund on Asylum, Migration and Integration 2014-2020, it was noted that the National Program was financed with 500 million Euros, of which 310 million were funded by the European Union. The delegation recalled that additional funding had been provided in 2013 and 2014 to tackle the unprecedented migrant flows.

16. The delegation indicated that since 2006 the residence permit in Italy was issued in the form of a smart card. This system allowed monitoring and processing applications for the first release and the renewal of the residence permit. The delegation provided details regarding this system.

17. It was noted that from the 1st of January to the 23rd October 2014, 151.126 migrants had arrived by sea and that 12.164 were unaccompanied minors. Unaccompanied minors were entitled to a residence permit, until they reached the age of 18. Upon coming of age, they could obtain a residence permit either for study or working reasons. Unaccompanied minors benefited from numerous protections: the right to education, to healthcare, accommodation in a safe place, and the right to guardianship. Additionally, Italian Law forbids the deportation of minors as a general rule.

18. The delegation indicated that the stigmatisation of certain ethnic or social groups remained a matter of serious concern for the central Government and local Authorities and the country was strongly committed to eradicating racist or xenophobic attitudes within society.

19. It was noted that the Italian legal framework contained a wide range of criminal, civil and administrative law provisions to combat racism and information regarding such provisions was provided.

20. On the advanced questions regarding anti-Semitism and Islamophobia, the delegation noted that the Government was strongly committed to countering all forms of religious discrimination and social prejudices and indicated that new impulse has been given to inter-religious dialogue since 2012 when the Government convened a Committee for Inter-religious Dialogue.

21. The Italian Government was also committed to gender equality and prevention and removal of discrimination for reasons directly or indirectly grounded on sex, racial or ethnic origin, religion or belief, age or gender identity.

22. Regarding the so-called blank resignations, it was clarified that in compliance with Act No. 92/2012, the resignation became effective only after a multistage procedure involving among others local job centers, trade unions and the Ministry of Labor. Fines in cases of violation have been increased, in addition to criminal proceedings.

23. Concerning the promotion of LGBT peoples' rights, the adoption of the LGBT National Strategy for 2013-2015 was recalled. Four main areas of intervention were identified: education and training; employment; security and prisons; media and communication. For each area goals were specified to promote equality and combat discrimination against LGBT persons.

24. The delegation noted that Roma, Sinti and Caminanti communities had been living in Italy for a long time. With regard to their integration, Italy highlighted the adoption of the "National Strategy for the Inclusion of Roma, Sinti and Caminanti Communities 2012-2020" in accordance with European Commission Communication No. 173/2011.

25. It was also indicated that no constitutional reforms would affect Slovenian-speaking communities living in Friuli Venezia Giulia. As pointed out in the national report several measures have been implemented since the enactment of Act No. 38/2001 including, among others, the use of minority languages in joint bodies and in public administration.

26. The delegation noted that a Bill was under discussion in the Italian Parliament to amend the Criminal Code and the Criminal Procedural Code and to revise the legal definition of defamation (including defamation through the press and any other means of publicity, insult and libel) and related sanctions, excluding any reference to detention.

27. With regard to the 17.309 proceedings pending at the European Court for Human Rights, it was recalled that these mainly concerned the lengths of trials and the delays in the payment of compensation. It was added that Italy had agreed with the European Court on a two-year action plan for the final settlement of about 7000 complaints regarding compensation. A similar solution should be expected also for the remaining 3000 applications regarding excessive length of proceedings, which had not been included in the action plan having been filed at a subsequent time.

28. The delegation added that approximately 3500 more complaints concerning living conditions in prisons have been filed by prison inmates. Following the pilot judgement of “Stella vs Italy” and “Rexepi vs Italy” in 2014, it could be expected that the European Court would invite prison inmates to apply to the domestic courts as the judgement stated clearly that the new domestic remedies available to detainees were fully in line with the European Convention on Human Rights.

29. The delegation indicated that the National Action Plan on trafficking in human beings, Legislative Decree N° 24/14 would be adopted by the Council of Ministers by the end of this year together with the “Single Program regulation for the assistance and social integration of the victims of trafficking”.

30. It was also indicated that in order to reduce prison overcrowding, Italy had adopted several measures mainly extending the recourse of house arrest as an alternative to imprisonment. The delegation provided detailed information on other measures adopted to reduce overcrowding. It was also noted that following the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the UN Convention Against Torture in 2012, recent legislation had also provided for the establishment by the Ministry of Justice of a National Authority for the rights of detainees.

31. The delegation stated that in Italy national interventions of social assistance were mainly addressed to people out of the labour market, in particular to elderly people and persons with disabilities and provided details regarding such assistance. It was noted that in 2008 a “social card” had been introduced to provide further help to certain categories.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

32. During the interactive dialogue, 92 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

33. Chad welcomed Italy’s efforts in implementing the recommendations received in the first cycle and noted in particular ratification of international instruments and efforts made for integrating foreigners and rescuing migrants at sea.

34. Chile expressed appreciation for efforts made to implement human rights policies. Chile also noted the lack of some institutional and legal instruments and the persistence of certain discriminatory attitudes.

35. China commended Italy for helping migrants, particularly for searching and rescuing innocent lives at sea; for fighting against racism and protecting the Roma and other ethnic minorities; for cooperating on human trafficking and asylum issues.

36. Costa Rica commended Italy for the adoption of the National Plan against Racism, Xenophobia and Intolerance and for ratifying instruments related to the protection of women against domestic violence and the exploitation and trafficking of children.

37. Côte d’Ivoire noted Italy’s reforms on gender equality, access of vulnerable persons to public services and measures in favour of migrants and asylum seekers.

38. Cuba noted resources allocated to combating discrimination, and encouraged further efforts in that regard, as well as to improve process of reception, detention and integration of migrants.

39. Cyprus welcomed efforts to promote women's and children's rights, eliminate discrimination and save lives at sea, and welcomed Italy's collaboration in dealing with the complex issue of migration in the Mediterranean basin.
40. The Democratic Republic of the Congo noted the ratification of OP-CAT, and efforts to promote the rights of women, children minorities and migrants.
41. Denmark welcomed Italy's commitment to establishing a national human rights institution. It expressed concern about migrants' rights, particularly regarding children.
42. Djibouti welcomed the national report, and humanitarian actions taken by Italy in dealing with migration issues.
43. The Dominican Republic welcomed the ratification of the Council of Europe Conventions on gender-based and domestic violence and protecting children from sexual exploitation and abuse.
44. Egypt expressed confidence that Italy's increasing efforts in sea rescue operations and migration management agreements with neighbouring countries, including Egypt, would effectively address existing challenges.
45. Eritrea noted with appreciation Italy's commitment in discharging national and international obligations, efforts to promote and protect human rights and strong support for the UPR process.
46. Estonia noted the ratification of OP-CAT, establishment of an acting children's ombudsman, and rescue efforts to address the exceptional arrival of irregular migrants.
47. Ethiopia welcomed ongoing efforts to combat trafficking and discrimination; and to support female entrepreneurs and persons with disabilities and promote minority languages.
48. Finland commended the adoption of the National Strategy for the Inclusion of Roma, Sinti and Travellers Communities in Italy 2012-2020 and asked how it would be implemented.
49. Greece welcomed positive developments in human rights, including the strengthened legislative and institutional framework. Complex migration issues required regional cooperation and a short evaluation of the Praesidium Project was therefore requested.
50. Gabon recognized Italy's efforts to combat racism, and all forms of discrimination, xenophobia and intolerance and welcomed Italy's efforts to host migrants.
51. Germany commended the adoption of legislation to address prison overcrowding and gender-based violence. Funds to develop an anti-violence action plan and accommodate victims of violence were welcomed.
52. Ghana commended the financial and human resources dedicated to the protection of human rights, particularly for migrants, minority groups and women.
53. France noted the promotion of human rights by Italy, both internationally and within the Human Rights Council. The ratification of OP-CAT was commended.
54. Guatemala welcomed ratification of OP-CAT, increased sea rescue operations for migrants and the strengthened National Office against Discrimination. Birth registration was an area of concern.
55. The Holy See noted progress in human rights, including the provision of social services for migrants and refugees, the Mare Nostrum operation and the Praesidium project.

56. Hungary recognized efforts to improve prison conditions and establish a National Human Rights Institution. Stateless persons, mostly Roma, faced bureaucratic obstacles to acquiring citizenship.
57. India referred to reported concerns of violence against women and of racist violence and killings of migrants and asked about effective remedies provided to victims.
58. Indonesia considered Italy's commitment to sea search and rescue activities as a good example to follow in handling the exceptional arrival of migrants and respecting their human rights.
59. Islamic Republic of Iran expressed concern at the situation of Roma and Sinti and at sustained racial discrimination against minorities, especially Muslims.
60. Iraq commended the adoption of measures to prevent forcible return and the strategy in support of asylum-seekers and persons entitled to international protection.
61. Ireland, while welcoming measures taken, urged Italy to submit outstanding treaty body reports and consider elaborating a second cycle mid-term UPR report.
62. Israel commended Italy's efforts to implement initiatives on immigration and integration matters and referred to treaty body observations regarding the persistence of hate speech.
63. Japan appreciated Italy's role and improved transparency in addressing migrants and refugees and encouraged measures to improve the situation of minorities, such as Roma and Sinti.
64. Kenya asked about progress made in establishing a national human rights institution and, while acknowledging challenges faced, believed that the treatment and reception of migrants and asylum seekers could be improved.
65. Kuwait commended Italy's close cooperation with United Nations organizations and other international bodies and its commitment to increase overseas development assistance (ODA).
66. Kyrgyzstan noted that Italy had undertaken significant reforms and provided considerable resources relating to human rights. It commended Italy's efforts to save lives at sea.
67. Lebanon welcomed Italy's efforts to implement accepted recommendations from the first UPR cycle and the ratification of OP-CAT.
68. Libya commended the ratification of OP-CAT, the adoption of the National Action Plan on racism, xenophobia and intolerance, and action in support of marginalized and vulnerable groups, to protect the rights of the child and to combat human trafficking.
69. Liechtenstein commended Italy's ratification of the Rome Statute and OP-CAT and its establishment of a National Authority for the rights of detainees.
70. Malaysia welcomed the resources contributed by Italy to the protection of human rights and the National Action Plan on racism, xenophobia and intolerance.
71. Maldives noted that despite progress regarding women's and children's rights, areas of concern remained. It welcomed efforts to protect migrants, refugees and asylum seekers.
72. Mauritania welcomed the measures taken to respect the rights of migrants and to combat racial discrimination. However, greater efforts were required to address the remaining challenges.

73. Mexico noted measures addressing discrimination, gender-based violence and the integration of minorities, which should result in fewer children from those communities living on the street.

74. Montenegro commended the ratification of OP-CAT and the establishment of the National Authority for the rights of detainees. It asked how prison overcrowding was addressed.

75. The delegation addressed question on cooperation and foreign aid, 'Mare Nostrum', migration, the issue of ratification of some international instruments and the Slovenian speaking minority.

76. It was noted that the title of the ministry, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation had come about because of a reform that had been passed this year, after twenty-seven years; and that one of the main tasks of the Ministry was also to try to increase the Italian ODA. It was noted that some progress had been attained and that for the third year in a row Italy had increased the budget on cooperation and foreign aid by ten percent.

77. Italy recalled the extraordinary burden faced vis-à-vis the central Mediterranean route and the number of migrants that were arriving. It noted that this was also linked to a historical phenomenon, recalling that according to the IOM data, three percent of the global population was made up of migrants noting that however, ninety percent of such movement was intra-continental. It was highlighted that the issue was not only an Italian matter, this was a European issue. The delegation underscored that the long term scenario that Europe had to face vis-à-vis migration would need to take into account that in 1950 the European population was double that of the African population and that, according to the average forecast of UN demographics, in 2050, two generations' time, the population of Africa would be the three times that of Europe.

78. The delegation indicated that migration had to be managed and migrant's conditions improved, but that this could not be reduced solely to an issue of border control or border management. Efforts made would need to be combined with international development and foreign aid and a model for the future of Africa. In 2015, a new conversation about post development agenda should be able to provide a common grammar to deal with this issue, which would be one of the legacies of the Italian presidency of Europe.

79. It was also noted that, when referring to migrants, many were talking about migrants and potentially asylum seekers. Formerly, 80% of the people coming from African countries or from Asian countries were seeking a better future in Europe. In 2013/2014 almost 75% of those arriving were coming from countries at war, countries in post-conflict situations, fragile countries. It was stressed that the issue of migrants cannot be considered as a stand-alone issue and should be considered taking into account the broader picture that links together migrants, asylum seekers, political fragility and instability and the crisis that is taking place in 2014. Italy was not politically and geopolitically in the position to deal with this huge effort.

80. On ratification of international instruments, it was noted that formerly the rate and speed of ratification had not been very quick. However, now the government had the intention to quickly ratify many pending instruments. It was noted that the ratification process of a number of pending treaties was underway. The ratification process of the optional protocol of ICESCR had been completed and deposit of ratification instrument would take place soon. Additionally, the ratification process of the third optional protocol to the Convention on the Rights of the Child had been initiated. Despite the non-ratification of the Convention on the rights of migrant workers, the Italian legislative framework already guaranteed the rights of regular and irregular migrants. Additionally, Italy was committed to promoting a debate at the European level on this topic.

81. Concerning racism, the delegation recalled the country's commitment and highlighted the need to work on the ground for a successful interaction among cultures, traditions and beliefs. At the national level the country would continue to make all efforts to ensure that global challenges posed by racism were met in the most appropriate ways.

82. About the issue of gender stereotypes and women in politics, the delegation noted that 31 % of the Members of Parliament were women. A recent law also determined the increase of female representation on boards of publicly listed and state owned companies.

83. In terms of the fight against religious discrimination, it was noted that the Government was strongly committed in countering all forms of religious discrimination.

84. It was also recalled that the Government recently formally reaffirmed before the parliament its intention to establish a national human rights institution noting also that three bills had been introduced and would be debated.

85. Morocco enquired about measures taken at the local and national level to promote human rights education in schools and universities.

86. The Netherlands commended Italy's promotion of the abolition of capital punishment and recognized the significant challenges it faced owing to growing numbers of migrants.

87. Nicaragua noted that migration was a significant challenge that Italy should not confront alone; Europe should address the phenomenon using a regional approach.

88. The Niger encouraged Italy to finalise ongoing initiatives to implement remaining recommendations that it was not able to implement by the second UPR cycle and, in particular, establish a National Human Rights Commission in accordance with the Paris Principles

89. Norway commended Italy's efforts to save migrants at sea. However, it noted the high number of pending human rights cases and judgements against Italy with the European Court.

90. Pakistan noted the efforts made by Italy in implementing the recommendations received during the first UPR cycle.

91. Peru commended Italy for the adoption of the law 67/2014, on the decriminalization of illegal migration, the establishment of the National Action Plan against racism.

92. The Philippines commended Italy's action in saving lives at sea and the Mare Nostrum operations. It expressed concern about domestic regulations on detention of irregular migrants.

93. Portugal praised Italy for the priority given to the protection of the rights of migrants and for the comprehensive policies adopted and asked for information on the measures taken by the National Office against Discrimination.

94. Qatar welcomed the steps taken to improve immigration and integration policies. It commended action to combat human trafficking and to strengthen inter-institutional cooperation on trafficking and asylum.

95. The Republic of Moldova appreciated Italy's efforts in protecting migrants and applauded action to save lives at sea and recognized measures taken to combat trafficking in human beings.

96. Romania welcomed Italy's ratification of several conventions and its adoption of various policies and noted its actions to combat racial discrimination and violence against women.

97. The Russian Federation commended Italy's work to guarantee human rights. It urged Italy to adopt effective measures to stabilise the situation in respect to combating and preventing violations of migrants' rights, including ensuring the functioning of the humanitarian missions to rescue irregular migrants from Africa and Middle East, drowning in Mediterranean see (Russian Federation);
98. Saudi Arabia commended the introduction by the State Police of specialized courses on investigative techniques covering crimes against children, sexual offences and domestic violence.
99. Senegal noted the significant progress made in relation to education, health, services for vulnerable persons and the integration of migrants.
100. Serbia welcomed the ratification of OP-CAT and activities to integrate minority groups and took positive note of the legislative measures to reduce prison overcrowding.
101. Sierra Leone welcomed achievements in various areas of human rights. It noted that more should be done to address racism, violence against women, child sex abuse and juvenile justice and to increase ODA.
102. Slovenia noted the establishment of a panel addressing the Slovenian minority in Italy and asked how their rights would be guaranteed within local government reform.
103. South Sudan commended Italy's use of house arrest rather than custodial sentences for mothers. However, it was concerned by discrimination and xenophobia towards migrants.
104. Spain commended measures aimed at persons with disabilities and the ratification of a European Council convention on gender based and domestic violence. It was concerned by increased racism and xenophobia.
105. Sri Lanka urged Italy to consider ratifying ICRMW. It commended Italy's adoption of the National Action Plan on racism, xenophobia and intolerance.
106. The Sudan commended action taken to combat trafficking, expressed concern regarding the inhuman situation in reception centres and urged the Government to take all necessary measures to ensure respect for the rights of migrants.
107. Sweden welcomed Italy's ratification of the Rome Statute and its additional protocol. It recalled obligation of non-refoulement noting that Italy summarily returned persons arriving from Greece ports.
108. Switzerland noted the significant measures taken to implement accepted recommendations from Italy's first UPR cycle and indicated that the creation of a national torture-prevention mechanism was vital.
109. Thailand supported Italy's international cooperation in addressing irregular migration and human trafficking. Thailand welcomed Italy's efforts to accelerate asylum applications and to allow detainees to receive professional training.
110. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia encouraged Italy to establish a national human rights institution fully in line with the Paris Principles and to combat racial violence against the Roma and Sinti.
111. Togo welcomed the "Mare Nostrum" operation, which had saved thousands of lives at sea, and commended the decriminalization of illegal migration.
112. Trinidad and Tobago noted that Italy had increased resources to support human rights policies, ratified international human rights instruments and endeavoured to fight discrimination.

113. Tunisia welcomed the action taken in recent years to assist a large number of immigrants and asylum-seekers and encouraged Italy to pursue such action.
114. Turkey noted Italy's achievements concerning its immigration and integration policies and commended the increased capacity of its reception centres and its Praesidium project.
115. Ukraine commended Italy's ratification of OP-CAT and its cooperation with OHCHR. Ukraine encouraged Italy to continue to take steps to protect the human rights of migrants and to establish an independent national human rights institution.
116. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland welcomed Italy's Action Plan on the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights and its efforts to reduce prison overcrowding.
117. The United States of America commended the "Mare Nostrum" operation but was concerned by poor conditions in the migrant reception system and violence against the Roma.
118. Uruguay encouraged Italy to continue promoting gender equity. It welcomed legislative action and consultations on the establishment of a national human rights commission.
119. Uzbekistan welcomed the establishment of a number of human rights mechanisms, including the National Authority on detainees' rights. It noted concerns about discrimination against migrants and ethnic and religious minorities, and violence against women and children.
120. Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela encouraged Italy to adopt the draft legislation concerning the establishment of a national human rights commission based on the Paris Principles.
121. Viet Nam encouraged Italy to strengthen action to tackle discrimination based on race or gender, to protect vulnerable groups in the context of austerity, migrants and minorities, and to combat human trafficking.
122. Algeria praised the implementation of recommendations from the first cycle but noted that the human and other resources allocated to the National Office against Racial Discrimination had been reduced although its mandate had been expanded.
123. Angola expressed the hope additional resources be allocated to the education sector to assist needy families and to integrate minorities, including immigrant children, into the education system.
124. Argentina welcomed the fact that priority was being given to ratification of the ICPPED. It expressed concern regarding respect for the rights of migrants.
125. Armenia commended the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on Action against Trafficking in Human Beings and the implementation of social protection programmes for victims of trafficking.
126. Australia commended Italy's response to challenges posed by increased flows of irregular migration. It noted that the slow pace of Italy's judicial process and prison overcrowding diluted the right to a fair trial and the rights of prisoners and detainees.
127. Azerbaijan welcomed Italy's ratification of OP-CAT and noted concerns expressed by CERD regarding the persistence of stereotypes associating ethnic minorities and non-citizens with criminality and Islam with terrorism.

128. Bahrain urged Italy to increase efforts to prevent and combat discrimination against ethnic and religious minorities and to step up action to prevent trafficking and to protect trafficking victims.

129. Bangladesh noted concerns expressed by treaty bodies at the negative portrayal of migrants and Roma, and at stereotypes associating ethnic minorities and non-citizens with criminality and Islam with terrorism.

130. Botswana noted with satisfaction legislative and policy measures adopted in support of freedoms of expression and religion, the fight against human trafficking, and the protection of women and children.

131. Brazil welcomed the implementation of migration related recommendations from Italy's first UPR. However, it expressed concern regarding discriminatory treatment of migrants and Roma and stressed the need to adopt specific legislation on violence against women.

132. Bulgaria welcomed that prevention of human trafficking and protection of its victims remained a priority for Italy. Bulgaria commended the adoption of the National Action Plan on racism, xenophobia and intolerance.

133. Burundi noted with appreciation that education was compulsory for all, including foreign minors. It welcomed the strengthened and expanded role of the National Office against Racial Discrimination.

134. Canada requested an update on improved protection against all forms of discrimination. Canada was concerned about the social inclusion of women and LGBTI persons and urged continued action to prevent violent acts against women and girls.

135. On additional questions on migration, the delegation noted that there had been an approximately forty percent increase in numbers in 2013 and that sixty-seven percent of the applications submitted had been accepted.

136. The delegation also noted that various measures taken over the years aimed at the integration and inclusion of the Roma, Sinti and Caminanti communities have evidenced the complexity of the situation. Italy is committed to implement a number of EC and UN findings and is working in compliance with all relevant international human rights instruments.

137. The country was developing and implementing national and regional initiatives as well as local plans for social inclusion.

138. The delegation also provided additional information on measures adopted to address prison overcrowding and mentioned the establishment of a national Authority for the protection of the rights of detainees and prisoners.

139. On integration and education it was noted that the Ministry of Education had launched an experimental training plan for teachers and school managers.

140. Information was also provided on: awareness-raising actions for the prevention of violence against women, action to promote education and inclusion of persons with disabilities and the 'Praesidium Project', which is implemented by UNHCR, IOM, Save the Children and the Italian Red Cross with the support of the Italian Ministry of Interior focusing their activities towards the most vulnerable categories of migrants, such as unaccompanied minors.

141. With regard to the issue of the Slovenian minority the delegation mentioned numerous initiatives adopted, including in the public sphere, at the provincial and municipal levels as well as by bodies holding public service concessions.

142. Finally, on corporal punishment the delegation recalled that corporal punishment had been unlawful punishment in Italy in schools since 1928.

143. Italy expressed its gratitude to the delegations that had participated in its review and stated that all the questions and recommendations would be very seriously examined, in an open and cooperative attitude, as a matter of priority. Replies would be provided before the 28th session of the Human Rights Council, in March 2015

144. The delegation stated that Italy continued to look at the Universal Periodic Review with confidence and expectation and would continue to work actively in the future UPR sessions to improve human rights situations in all countries.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations**
